HELPING DURING COVID – AND ALWAYS

We are in the middle of a devastating health and economic crisis. Unlike any we've seen before.

And yet, when people needed help for the first time during this crisis, United Way was there. When families that were already stretched were about to reach their breaking point, United Way was there.

Throughout this crisis, needs changed. From health concerns to lack of food to job loss to childcare strains, United Way was poised and ready to answer the calls for help. Every step of the way, United Way was there as we've always been: helping people.

When you give to United Way, you're building a solid foundation for our community, so help is there when a crisis impacts a few or all of us. Please, keep helping.

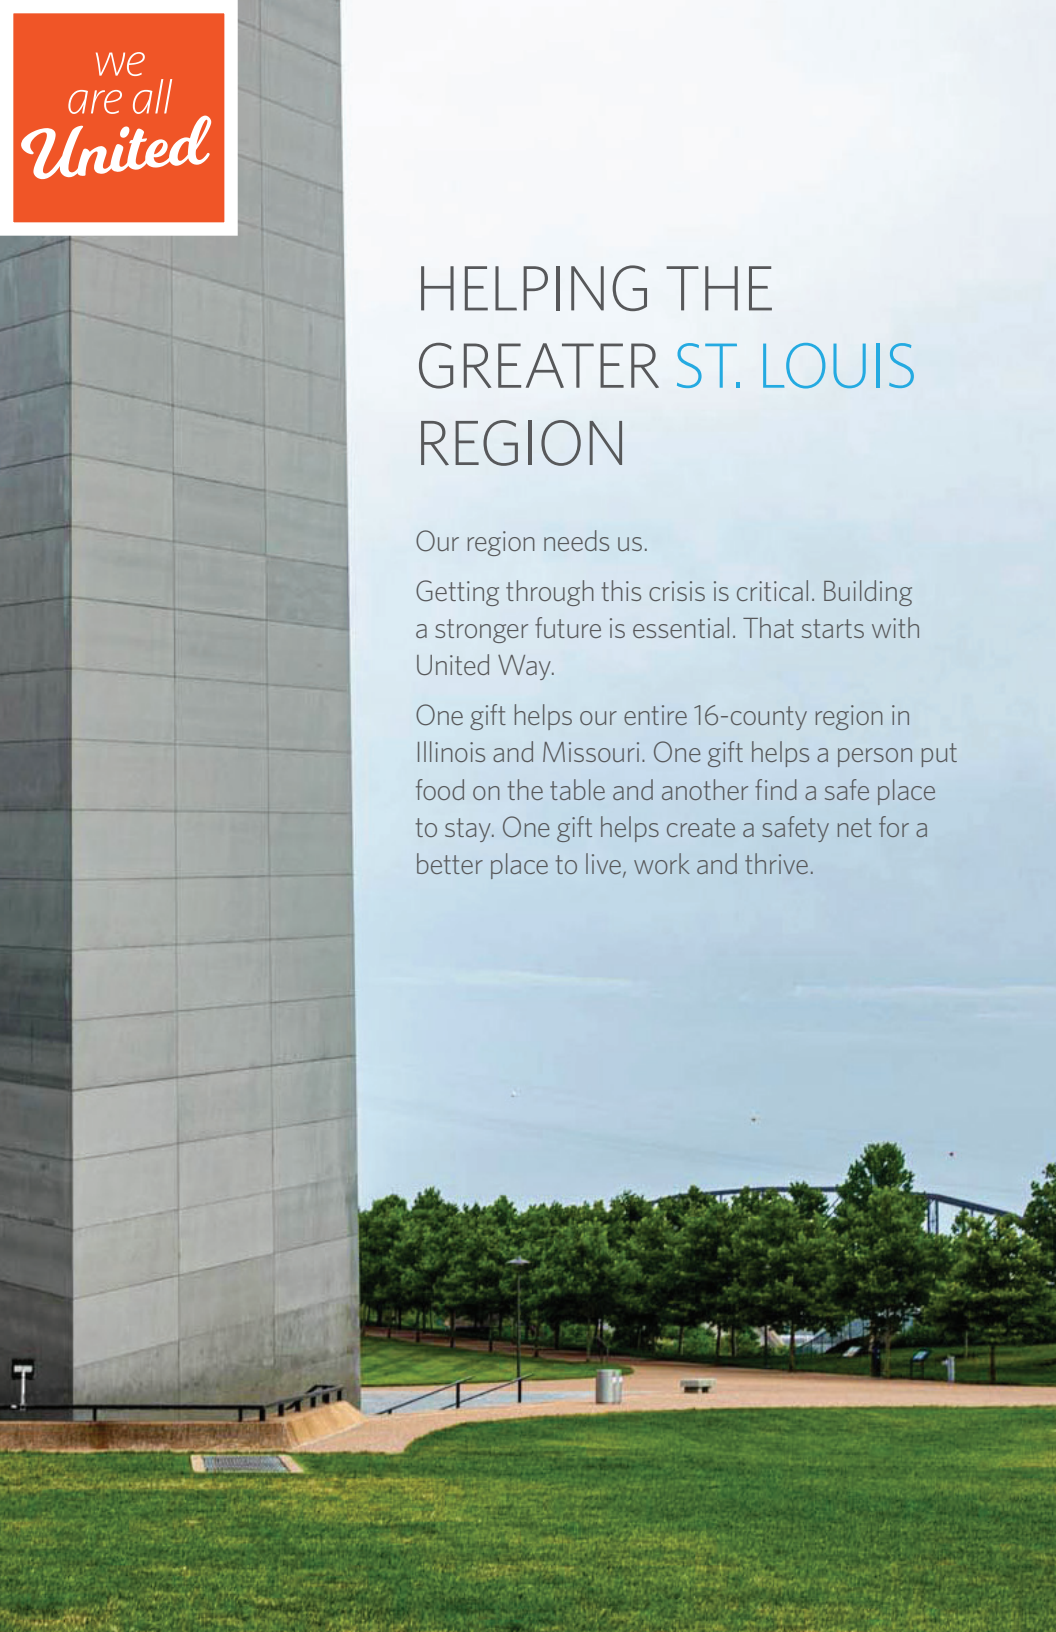
HELPING THE GREATER ST. LOUIS REGION

Our region needs us.

Getting through this crisis is critical. Building a stronger future is essential. That starts with United Way.

One gift helps our entire 16-county region in Illinois and Missouri. One gift helps a person put food on the table and another find a safe place to stay. One gift helps create a safety net for a better place to live, work and thrive.



SPRING BACK UP

A safety net isn't just there to catch. It's there to provide support. To bounce back.

Whether it's immediate basic needs, such as food, shelter or transportation, or long-term support, such as daycare, education, job training, after-school programs or counseling, each service represents a vital thread that strengthens the safety net.
